New Member Meetings

Are you a new member of UFCW Local 1167? Has one of your co-workers recently joined our union?

Get up to a $65 credit toward your initiation fee when you attend a New Member Training Meeting within six months of your hire date.

Call (909) 877-5000 for dates, locations and answers to any questions.

Notice to all members: Your dues are now payable!

If you are one of the few members of the local who are NOT YET signed up for dues checkoff: YOUR DUES ARE NOW DUE AND PAYABLE. IF YOUR DUES ARE NOT PAID ON OR BEFORE THE FIRST OF EVERY MONTH, YOU WILL AUTOMATICALLY SUSPEND YOURSELF.

With dues checkoff, all future dues can be deducted automatically from your pay check. If you do not have an authorization form, call the local and one will be sent to you immediately.

Nonpayment or payment of the incorrect amount will automatically suspend you — a costly and inconvenient mistake. Although not required, the local, as a courtesy, normally sends billing notices by first-class mail to those not on dues checkoff. It is the member’s obligation to pay dues in a timely manner. Not receiving a notice is not an excuse for failure to pay dues on time.

Avoid suspension. Authorize dues checkoff today!
Protect your health care: Help us steer clear of the ‘Cadillac tax’

When Congress passed the Affordable Care Act early in 2010, some of us in the Labor Movement were concerned about something called the “Cadillac Tax.”

Billed as a measure to control health care costs and fund health care subsidies, the Cadillac Tax is more of a punishment inflicted on union members who successfully negotiated quality health care as part of their employment compensation packages.

Here’s how it will work when the tax takes effect in 2018:

First, government auditors require funds to provide specific information on the health plan’s projected cost. If this value exceeds a certain threshold, your benefit trust funds will be charged a tax. This tax will be 40 cents for every dollar over this allowed threshold.

Currently, the threshold is set at $10,200 for individual coverage and $27,500 for family coverage. The method for conducting this testing is complex and specific coverage limits can change based on the type of plan involved.

A need to act

What is clear however is that unless Congress or the White House acts to change or eliminate this tax, it could seriously hurt the ability of the trust fund to maintain your current level of benefits. You might be asked to bear more of the burden of health care costs as higher co-pays, deductibles or premiums.

those who want to kill the ACA rather than fix it. That leaves the White House, which may have the ability to move the threshold levels higher or use some other method to eliminate or reduce the tax’s damaging effects on hard-working union members.

What you can do

Until something good happens on the federal level, our members have the ability to delay the Cadillac tax, at least for a while.

The key is reducing the overall cost of benefits paid out by the trust funds. In this way, we can avoid hitting the Cadillac tax threshold for as long as possible.

Our benefit trust funds provide opportunities to help you improve your health and wellbeing without requiring use of expensive medical benefits that drive up the overall costs of providing services. An ounce of prevention is indeed worth a pound of cure.

For example, you can eat better, exercise more, stop smoking, reduce your consumption of alcohol, use generic medicines (as opposed to more expensive “name brand” drugs) and avoid going to an emergency room unless you need to.

Get annual physicals, take biometric screenings, wear sun block, stay out of the heat, wear your seatbelts and never, ever drink and drive.

Doing these things — and more — will accomplish more than steering clear of the Cadillac tax. It will put you in the driver’s seat for a happier life.

Earlier this year, union members read in the Desert Edge about retired UFCW Local 1167 steward Patsy Svette and her work with Habitat for Humanity in the Hemet/San Jacinto area.

Another member at “the Habitat” is Frank Aguirre, who is working hard on a house in Hemet. Once he’s done with the structure, Habitat for Humanity will begin work on his own house.

“We’re about 90 percent done with the house we’re working on,” Aguirre said. “There is some painting and such to be completed. The family should be able to move into the house by Christmas.

“I work on the house whenever I get a chance,” Aguirre continued. “Any free time I get, I’m there.”

Svette knows Aguirre from her time at Staters Bros. 46, where she worked for 20 years until her retirement in 2008.

Aguirre volunteered at Habitat for Humanity years ago, long before he knew he had a house coming his way. He’s still building “sweat equity” by working on other people’s homes, including more than 200 hours in on the house he’s building now.

These homes are not free. They are built at lower cost for first-time home buyers who have had steady employment for two years and are residents of California.

Aguirre’s family — including wife Jessica and children Alana, Jaylene, Elyssa, Leanna and Gabriel — and the other families who qualify for homes will pay their own mortgages, taxes and insurance.

“In Hemet, we focus on working families so their children can have security and stability as they grow up,” he said.

Thankful for union

Aguirre said he is thankful for both the Habitat and his union, but he wasn’t always so fortunate.

Ten years ago, he worked for Walmart.

“In the beginning I bought it all — all their propaganda,” he said. “They led me to believe I was part of a team and a family and that we all take care of each other.

“Slowly but surely, that faded away, and I realized they were not all the happy people they say they are;”

No-cause termination

In his fifth year of employment at Walmart, Aguirre was fired for a forklift violation because he helped a customer.

“The video security monitors showed that I clearly did nothing wrong, but it didn’t matter. My manager wanted me gone and I had no union to back me up.

“Maybe it was because I had too many years with the company and they needed to lower the payroll. Maybe it was because I looked at him wrong one morning.”

Aguirre saw an opening at his local Stater Bros. and applied right away because he had heard good things about the company.

“I wanted to work for a company with a union contract,” he said. “I wanted to go somewhere where I have someone to back me up, somewhere where they can’t fire you for no reason.”

He now has five years with Stater Bros., where he is a meat clerk. His union job provides the protections he wanted, as well as decent wages, benefits and time off so he can work with the Habitat for Humanity.

“The difference between union work and non-union work is more than night and day,” he said. “I wish more people realized that.

“Too many people don’t know how good they have it working in a union store.”

Winter 2015/2016
Rite Aid steward builds strong support for union

When you’re in a union, you stand strong as a membership,” Darla Necochea says. “You do what’s expected as a union member.”

The steward at Rite Aid 6293 in San Jacinto knows what she’s talking about, having built a strong record of success in sharing the union’s message with her coworkers.

“The word is that if Darla says to do it, you do it,” an admiring coworker said.

Following the recently concluded negotiations with Rite Aid, the members at Necochea’s store voted 100 percent in favor of ratifying the contract.

A few weeks earlier, her coworkers voted unanimously to grant UFCW Local 1167’s leaders authority to call a strike if one became necessary to bargain a strong labor agreement. A strike was not called, but the vote was critically important in successfully concluding the negotiations.

“We carpooled to get to the strike votes and the ratification meetings,” Necochea said.

“We stood together and did what it took to get a fair contract. None of us wanted to go on strike, but we had to stand together and stay strong.”

She said she is grateful the union’s leaders were able to bring the Rite Aid members a good agreement for them to ratify.

“Everything the union has done for us, I have enjoyed,” said. “I raised my kids as a single mom because of the union. I have security, amazing insurance benefits and guaranteed wage increases.”

Necochea, 65, started working in the industry in 1969 as a clerk for Thrifty.

“I was one of the first actual key carriers,” she said.

When you’re in a union, you stand strong as a membership,’ Darla Necochea says. ‘You do what’s expected as a union member.’

After Thrifty was bought by Payless, she worked as a data maintenance coordinator and a bookkeeper. She traveled and did merchandising, which she enjoys.

“There’s basically nothing I haven’t done for the company,” she said.

“I had to leave the union in 2007 to be a manager,” she recalled. “My district manager kept asking me to do it. I never wanted to be a manager, but I thought this would stop him from asking me.”

“I got written guarantees from the company that after I was done with being a manager, I could go back to my position as supervisor and return to the union.

“They kept their word and I returned in 2010. I didn’t want to mess up my retirement benefits that were coming my way when I retired.”

Necochea has two grown children and three grandsons — Mason, 4, Ethan, 7, and Landon, 10 She also has a granddaughter — Graclyn, 6.

In her spare time she goes to thrift stores and spends time with her family.

“It’s a good feeling to know that we’re locked in to our contract for the next three years,” Necochea said.

“Who knows what’s going to happen with Walgreens buying Rite Aid? We just don’t know. But I remember Payless was non-union when it bought Thrifty and we were able to negotiate a union contract.

“It helps that we have such strong dedication in our union leadership,” she added.

“We all do our part, which makes us strong.”

Rite Aid members ratify strong agreements

After months of difficult negotiations, a strike vote taken in July and an outpouring of community support, Rite Aid members in California ratified new agreements in October. The new contracts provide much-needed wage increases and maintain health care and pension benefits.

“Thank you to each and every member who stood by their union to gain a fair and equitable contract,” said President Rick Bruer.
Supporting our veterans

In late September, UFW Local 1167 gave back to veterans by volunteering for the Stand Down event at the March Air Force Reserve Base. Volunteers handed out boots, clothes, jackets, supplies, food and more for Veterans in need. The event provided DMV services, transition services and much needed services like showers and barber shop for homeless veterans. Members, activists and staff helped out at the event. Special Project Union Representatives (SPURs) Kenny Parada and Aaron Velarde helped organize attending the event with Union Representative Maria Perez. E-board member Jeff Shamblin brought his whole family to help.

Victoria Angulo

Victoria, daughter of Maria Angulo, who is a drug clerk at Rite Aid in Riverside, is a freshman at UC San Diego, where she majors in human biology. She aspires to become a physical therapist at a hospital or sports clinic. Her father had a stroke when she was 8 and his recovery inspired her desire to become a physical therapist. Her academic honors include a superintendent’s recognition award, a scholar athlete award and summa cum laude status as a Rancho Verde High School valedictorian. During her sophomore year in high school, she won a contest that enabled her to be mentored by Brenda Martinez, a track and field athlete, for a year. In her spare time, Victoria enjoys cross-country running, volunteering at her church and local library, reading and traveling. “I’d like to thank the union for this amazing opportunity,” Angulo said. “I’m so proud of my mom being a part of this great union.”

Michael Gardner

Michael, son of Patricia Pompa, who is a dentist at Rialto Family Dental, is enrolling in dental school at UCSF or Western University. He was inspired by his mother and he has received mentoring from a pre-dental club. Michael envisions running his own clinic and being a good member of his community. Michael earned his bachelor’s degree in Environmental Science from California State University Long Beach this year. He enjoys working as a swim instructor and lifeguard for East Highland Ranch and spending time with the brothers of his Theta Chi fraternity.

Julia Giese

Julia, daughter of Robert Ledford, a retired meat cutter who worked at Stater Bros. for 34 years, is completing her registered nurse program at San Bernardino Valley College. She wants to earn her bachelor’s degree in nursing and specialize in a niche area like surgical nursing or labor and delivery. She enjoyed volunteering in the emergency room at Redlands Community Hospital and St. Barnardine’s Medical Center where she was involved in postpartum care. Julia loves the outdoors, walking Dexter, her two-year old Bull Mastiff, painting, reading and spending time with her family and friends.

Rene Riley Militar

Riley, son of Janet Militar, who is a pharmacist at Rite Aid in Yucca Valley, graduated from Yucca Valley High School. He is attending UC Irvine and wants to major in biological sciences. He is interested in exercise science to become a physical therapist. Ever the athlete, Rene likes to swim and play tennis and basketball. He also plays the clarinet and ukulele and was Drum Major in the marching band. In high school, he earned a top-10 academic excellence award, a president’s education award and a Golden State Seal Merit diploma.

Roman Sanchez

Roman, son of Veronica Sanchez, who is a drug clerk at Rite Aid in Brawley, is a freshman at Humboldt State University, where he majors in theater arts and business management. In high school, he was the Drama Club president, a founder of the Humanitarian Club, a class president and a member of Junior Statesmen of America. Watching his grandparents run their Mexican restaurant sparked Roman’s entrepreneurial spirit. He credits them with helping him understand how to market and run a business successfully.
Get copies of pay stubs and read before you sign anything

We are getting more and more calls from members who say, “I don’t think I’m being paid correctly,” or ask, “Am I supposed to get premium pay?”

It turns out that some of these members hadn’t been paid correctly for a few years. Thousands of dollars that should have been paid to the member are now lost because we can only go back six months for back pay.

Just because you clocked in and worked a particular amount of hours in a week, it doesn’t necessarily mean you will be paid for those hours. Nothing is certain or perfect in our world, and there could be a technical glitch or other mistake that affects how you are paid.

One thing you can do to help is get copies of your pay stubs.

Yes, most companies have gone to paperless pay stubs, which is fine, but you still can get paper copies for yourself. Talk to your bookkeeper or store manager and find out how.

The second thing to do is check your pay stub! Don’t miss out on money that could be yours.

Be sure to review your stub every week to ensure you are paid for all of the hours you worked. Don’t just assume your company will pay you correctly.

Collecting your pay stubs might seem meaningless if you receive your paycheck through direct deposit or if you’ve already deposited the money at your bank, but that little piece of paper is critical if you ever have to file a grievance.

You could be short in hours being paid to you. How will you know if you don’t check? The company is not going to notify you on a shortage. It might not even know about any shortage in hours on your check.

Keep track of hours worked

Finally, keep track of all of the hours you worked so you can check your pay stub against your record on pay day. If there are any discrepancies that you can’t easily correct, contact your Union Rep right away.

If you don’t have a pay stub, we have no quick way of determining whether you have been paid for all of your hours worked, nor do we know if you’ve accrued sufficient hours to qualify for health care or earned vacation time.

If you have opted out of receiving your pay stub, speak with your manager or bookkeeper and let him or her know you want to begin receiving your pay stubs again.

Read everything you sign

We know management sometimes will come up to you at the check stand or wherever you’re helping customers and shove a paper in front of you, telling you to “sign this.” It’s extremely important to take the time to read what you sign before you sign it.

Tell your manager you’ll sign it but you need to take the time to read it first.

We have been in many suspension meetings where the company representative asks if a member recalls signing a document and the member replies “I don’t recall.” That’s probably because he or she didn’t read the document before signing it.

Our signatures are required on many documents covering company policies, store programs, store procedures, write-ups and more.

While it may seem like the quickest way to get back to work or be done with work for the day, it is never advisable to ever put your signature on something you have not read!
The solidarity of our membership keeps our union strong, even through times of great challenges.

Most recently, our Retail Drug members demonstrated the truth of this principle by standing together to win a strong contract with Rite Aid.

Next year, it will be our Retail Food members’ turn to step forward, once again, to show the employers we won’t settle for anything less than the best possible collective bargaining agreement.

In the meantime, UFCW Local 1167 continues its work serving and negotiating on behalf of workers in a broad array of industries. In addition to grocery workers, pharmacists, pharmacy techs and drug store clerks, we represent barbers, beauticians, meat packers, distribution plant workers and employees at dental offices and other facilities — including the Hacienda Heights Healthcare and Wellness Centre.

Hacienda Heights Healthcare and Wellness Centre is a skilled nursing facility that provides medical care, continuous nursing and other health and social services.

Its patients are not in an acute phase of illness requiring services in a hospital, but they do require primary restorative or skilled nursing services on an inpatient basis above the level of intermediate or custodial care. The goal is to help patients reach a degree of functioning to permit self-care in essential daily living.

Our union has nearly 60 members at the Hacienda Heights Health and Wellness Centre and Health Care Services Group, which is the housekeeping and custodial services side of the facility. They deserve compensation that honors their hard work and professionalism.

We were in negotiations for nine months while guiding the members through a bankruptcy. Finally, in early October, we reached a fair and equitable contract that the members ratified.

All of our members at Hacienda Heights Healthcare and Wellness Centre, including the Certified Nursing Assistants (CNAs), janitors, kitchen staff and housekeepers, deserve high praise for standing strong with their union and making this three-year contract possible.

Speaking up

Our members at Hacienda Heights Healthcare know what our union does and why it’s important.

One of our CNAs at the facility is Tonnette Morrison, who has been on the staff since December 2002.

“We have better pay increases with the union,” she said. “The union will listen to us to make sure our side of the story is told.”

Martha Torres, a cook and dietary aide who has been with Hacienda Heights Healthcare for 37 years, said:

“With the union, we have better pay and better benefits. The union will protect us when the company attempts to fire us for no reason. With the union, we know someone has our back.”

A union is as good as its membership, which in our case is mighty good.

Johnny Bates, Jr: Engineering a better future

Johnny Bates, Jr., winner of a $10,000 grant from the UFCW and Food Employers Benefit Fund Scholarship Award Program, is undecided between two majors, but the freshmen at Carnegie Mellon University is enjoying college life.

“I haven’t felt homesick yet and I’ve been enjoying my new freedom,” Bates said. “Weather is the biggest difference, though. I’m a desert rat, so I love the heat and it gets pretty cold out here.”

A Cathedral City native, Bates made the cross-country move to Pittsburgh in August. While he had his own room at his childhood home, he has adjusted to living with a roommate in his dorm.

“I got lucky with my roommate because we have so much in common,” he said. “We’re both active people. He plays basketball, and I’m a wrestler, so we’re at the gym a lot. We also like a lot of the same music.”

A fork in the road

Bates started off with intentions of being a chemical engineering major, but his roommate, a mechanical engineering student, is trying to persuade him to choose that path.

“If I stay on the chemical engineering route, I think I would like to work in the petroleum industry,” Bates said. “I’m not sure yet what I would do if I went down the mechanical engineering route.”

Although he remains undecided, he is thankful to be in college, where he has options in preparing for the future.

Bates and his mother, UFCW Local 1167 member Elizabeth Bates who works at Haggen in Palm Desert (formerly Vons, but now reportedly being purchased by Gelsons), had been nervous about paying his college tuition. Thanks to the Trust Fund, he can focus on hitting the books this year instead of looking for part-time work. “Winning this scholarship was relieving,” he said. “When the letter arrived in the mail, I waited an hour before opening it. When I did open it, I just let out a big sigh of relief.”

Jessica Goehring wants to become a molecular biologist and fight cancer

Jessica Goehring, winner of a $10,000 grant from the UFCW and Food Employers Benefit Fund Scholarship Award Program, is a freshman at Princeton University in New Jersey, where she majors in molecular biology.

Goehring’s freshman biology teacher influenced her desire to get into the field.

“He made learning about biology so fun,” Goehring said. “I loved his class so much, I took his AP biology class.”

In the spring, she graduated from Arlington High School in Riverside with valedictorian honors. The city’s youth council also voted her one of Riverside’s “25 Most Remarkable Teens” this year.

Last summer, she joined a program at UC Irvine and enjoyed learning about cancer. The experience solidified her desire to earn a master’s or doctorate in molecular biology so she can study cancer and infectious diseases as a career.

Her mother, Celina Goehring, a UFCW Local 1167 member who works at Ralphs, said she is sad her daughter is moving across the country for college, but she knows it’s for the best.

“I chose Princeton because of their undergraduate focus and family appeal,” she said. “The teachers there really want to see you succeed and that’s important to me.”

Thanks to the grant from the UFCW and Food Employers Benefit Fund Scholarship Award Program, Goehring can focus on her studies and not tuition payments.

“I was so scared to open the letter from the union and when I saw that I won a scholarship, I was in shock,” she recalled. “My parents are so happy for me and thankful to the union for this opportunity.”
Fresh & Easy files for bankruptcy

Fresh & Easy LLC filed for chapter 11 bankruptcy protection Oct. 30. Owned by the Yucaipa Companies, Fresh & Easy tumbled into bankruptcy in Wilmington, Del., the company’s second chapter 11 filing in two years. In late October, the company shut down its 97 stores and said it was hopeful that it could find a purchaser that would restart the business.

Fresh & Easy’s bankruptcy filing comes as the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., (A&P) owned by Yucaipa and Mount Kellett Capital Management, navigates its second chapter 11 filing, selling and shutting down stores. Since filing for bankruptcy in July, A&P has sold 159 of 296 stores.

In late 2013, Fresh & Easy, which was then owned by British supermarket giant Tesco, sold the majority of its stores—about 150 at the time—to Yucaipa. The 2013 transaction, part of the company’s first trip through bankruptcy, provided Fresh & Easy with $120 million in new financing, but the stores were never able to reach profitability. Fresh & Easy stores operate in Arizona, California and Nevada.

Beware of ABC stings

Checkers and Cashiers beware: The State of California Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC) is hitting the Coachella Valley hard this year with sting operations. Other areas most likely to be targeted too. Keep your jobs safe by following company policy when selling alcohol and tobacco products.

Apply for the UFCW and Food Employers Scholarship

The Scholarship Award Program, sponsored by The Union and Employer Trustees of the Southern California United Food & Commercial Workers Unions and Food Employers Benefit Fund, is one of the best offered to union members anywhere.

Each year, a Scholarship Selection Committee jointly selected by the Union and Employer Trustees reviews applications from all eligible participants and their children and selects approximately 300 winners of Awards at three levels: $10,000, $5,000 and $2,500.

The scholarships will cover tuition, but not housing expenses, books or other incidental expenses.

The deadline for Scholarship Award applications is Feb. 29. Applications must be postmarked by this date.

All members should receive an application in the mail. If you do not receive one, call your union or the Trust Fund office at (714) 220-2297 or (562) 408-2715, or visit www.scufcwfunds.com for details.
